David Salzman, who is the vice president of sleep medicine at the Mayo Clinic, says it's crucial to avoid stress, as it can disrupt sleep and impair nighttime growth hormone. Caffeine, another important tool for athletes, can sometimes cause insomnia, as it can make it harder for the body to slow down when it's time to go to bed. The light in your bedroom is particularly important to consider. You've probably heard this advice before, but experts say it's especially true for those who have had to fight against a jet lag. "When you have the shortest night, you want to try to get in as much light as you can before you go to bed
